An Elephant's Intelligence.

In India domesticated elephants are usually given drink from large wooden troughs filled with well water by means of a pump, and it is commonly an elephant that fills this trough. Every morning he goes regularie to his task. While visiting a friend at his fine residence in India I saw a large elephant engaged in pumping such a trough full of water.

In passing I noticed that one of the two tree trunks which supported the trough at either end had rolled from its place so that the trough, still elevated at one extremity, would begin to empty itself as soon as the water reached the lewel of the top at the other end, which lay on the ground.

I stop to see if the elephant would dis-cover anything wrong. Soon the water began to run off at the end which had lost its

The animal showed signs of perplexity when he saw this, but as the end nearest him lacked much of being full he continued to pump.

Finally seeing that the water continued to pass off he left the pump handle and began to consider the phenomenon. He seemed to find it difficult to explain. Three times he returned to his pumping, and three times he examined the trough. I was an absorbed looker on impatient to see the dawning of light He went and smelled of the tree trunk which had rolled from under the trough. I thought for a moment that he was going to put it in its place again. But it was not, as I soon understood, the end which ran over that disturbed his mind, but the end which he found it impossible to fill.

Raising the trough, which he then allowed to rest for an instant on one of his huge feet, he rolled away the second supporting log with his trunk and then set the trough down so that it rested at both ends on the ground. He then returned to the pump and completed his task.-Exchange.

"The Englishman went away again. Half an hour later he came back and asked the same question. He kept it up at regular intervals all day. Finally along about 6 o'clock the captain got mad, and when the Englishman came up with his question he grabbed him by the collar and shouted: "See here, you dod blamed idiot. THE BEAN-EATERS BEAT

THE CHAMPIONS OF THE UNION DEFEAT THE VIRGINIAS.

Nash Threw to First in the Good Old-Fash ioned Way and the "Rooters" Were Given a Chance to See All the Pitchers.

The Bean-Eaters from the town of culture came to this city yesterday afternoon, and before the setting sun rolled itself down its western track the eagle of victory perched upon their banners as complacently as the small boy takes his position on the left field fence.

The base-ball crank was delighted, and throughout the day between the times of signing bills of lading he filled himself with gleesomeness, and lo! he frolicked with the frolicksomeness of the playful kid as he gambols upon the grassy green in merry springtime.

His hopes were buoyant for the success of the Virginias, who were to cross bats with the learned chasers of the horsehide from the Hub, and the price of soap during the day rose and fell like the soft, sad sobbings of the wet sea waves which fall against the bank and go broke.

Clad in his high-priced trousers, with a crease down the middle like the sharp of a butter-knife, the admirer athletic sports wends his way to Island Park. Lo! he is merry and his heart bubbles forth.

The knowing crank takes his place on the bleacheries, where he can "root" for the home team and guy the decisions of the home team and guy the decisions of the home team. the umpire. The calm philosopher who wears yellow pig-skin shoes and a Rem-brandt beard sits in the grand-stand with that careless insouciance that would do credit to a Union League club man after a night at the fancy ball, and the "pick-ups" of the short stop and the catches of the hot flies of the pitcher seem to him but graceful efforts of merit that would vie with the pirouetting of that would vie with the pirouetting of Mamie and Marie.

At last the gong sounded and the game commenced. The Virginias were on their mettle. On the top of a flagstaff floated the championship banner of the Virginias, won by them on many a hotfought field during the season of 1892. Natural enthusiasm for the national game, together with a patriotic pride for the reputation of their native Southland, made them eager for the fray. Mike Enright's arm was in the "pink Mike Enright's arm was in the "pink of condition" to twirl the leather, and "Reddy Foster" was behind the home plate to hold him, as Long of the "Hub" plate to hold him, as zeros team faced him.

Disappointments in life are every-day courrences, but never did an "army tin cup drop into a well," leaving its owner more forlorn than wers the hopes owner more forlorn than wers the hopes when this same Long sailed owner more foriorn than were the hopes of the cranks when this same Long sailed the sphere to the vicinity of the left-field fence for a three bagger. The Spaulding manufacture bounded and ricocheted with abandon unusual, and one not accustomed to the flights of base-balls and time would have stood agalast and turned the hands of the clock to some convenient hour when he had lifteen minutes to catch a train of thought. This performance was a train of thought. This performance was indicative of what was to be followed, for as one after another they came.
"Mike's" curves, which have puzzled so many of Richmond's base-ball debutants, were easy riddles to the men who have batted Clarkson against the fences and scored base-hits against the Gotham lion.

The Bostons went to the bat, and, in the first inning sent ten men across the rubber. Fourteen of their nine crossed the plate-an extraordinary proceeding-and about nine base-hits were made from the curves of Enright.

There is no use to tell the detailed story of the game when men, acknowledged champions, play amateurs. Not once in the contest did the Bean Enters use more than usual effort to capture the use more than usual effort to capture the ball, and what might have been brilliant stops for fielders were allowed to go as base-hits for the champions of the City League.

Billy Nash, whom we all admire, threw from third to first in that same old beautiful way that he did of yore, and the celebrities of the Boston team fielded. stole bases and batted the ball in much the same manner that the cranks ex-pected them from the newspaper reports. The Virginias fought their battle well. despite the tremendous odds that wer against them. No team can go upon a ball field in the latter half of the firs ball field in the latter haif of the first inning with any degree of interest or hope of victory, when their opponents have taken such an overwhelming lead as did the Bostons, for ten men crossed the home plate for the people of culture. The score was 14 to 3, and the base-hits were innumerable. Errors abounded and in all truth the Virginias made but a poor showing against the champions of the world. The game was quite interesting, however, and the many good plays of both teams were vociferously applauded. both teams were vociferously applauded. The want of space alone prevents the publication of a detailed score.

Ashland Richmond.

The second game of ball between Ran tolph-Macon and Richmond College took lace at Ashland yesterday afternoon, and proved an easy victory for the hon team. The crowd present was the largest seen on the campus in a lor time. Errors were numerous and costly so the game could not by any means be called a brilliant one, though at times the fielding was first-class. The pitching of Robiuson, of the Randolph-Macon Col-Robinson, of the Randolph-Macon Col-lege team, was the feature of the game. He did his work splendidly, as will be shown by the small number of hits made off of him. With a little more practice both teams will put up a good game, though the Randolph-Macon College team ow are in better shape. The score was 15 to 6 in favor of the Randolph-Macon team.

On Wednesday, the 19th, the Richmond College and Virginias will play a game for the benefit of the Georgia booth of the the benefit of the Georgia booth of the bazaar. The game will be interesting for the cranks, and at the same time assist the ladies in their endeavor to make money for a worthy cause. The proceeds of the game will be used towards paying for the portieres intended for the State that pays the most money for it and this will be part of Virginia's for the State that pays the most money for it, and this will be part of Virginia's contribution. Help the cause and see a good game. Enright will again twirl for the Virginias, and will be backed up by Foster in his dsual faultiess style.

A game of ball was played at the flats on yesterday afternoon between the Little Eighth-street Club and Bostonians, which resulted in a score of 15 to 7 in favor of the Eighth-street kids.

talk with the writer. "My chief delight, after delivering a sonorous and impressive speech, is to turn up stage and try to 'break up' the company by saying something that is not in the text. I suppose I have broken many a managerial heart. Oh, what a life I led Augustin Daly for the four years I was with him! It was fine after fine, lecture after lecture. Dutch Noses.

A study of Jan Steen's pictures of Dutch home life some 200 years ago proves to conviction that in his day the noses of his countryfolk were quite as fantastic as they are now. Without their pendulous, heavy. mirth inspiring organs of smell, the artist's tipsy fiddlers and peasants, quack doctors and housewives, would not make one smile half as much as they do. It is well that the average Dutchman is a good natured fellow.

No matter whether his amiability be due
